

Contents

Acknowledgements	9
Foreword by John Wilkins	13
Introduction
From charred seeds to ancient texts	19
Chapter 1
The grains of Demeter	31
Cereals as food: the archaeobotanical record	31
The Neolithic and Bronze Age	31
Early historic periods	42
Cereals in ancient Greek texts	50
Cereals: Sítos, σῖτος (barley and wheat)	51
Krithé, κριθή (barley)	52
The grain of civilisation	52
Processing barley for food	57
Wheat	65
Free-threshing and glume wheats: deciphering the terms	65
Free-threshing wheats – Πυρός [pyrós]	67
The glume wheats: zéa, zeía, ζέα, ζειά, típhē, τίφη, ólyra, ὄλυρα	70
Ólyra	71
Típhē	72
Zeía (also in plural, zeiai), zéa	74
The transformation of wheat grain into food	75
Cereal bakes: exploring the diversity of ancient Greek bakery	78
Food from other cereals: millets, oats and rye	90
Kénchros, κέγχρος (millet) and élymos or élymos (Italian millet)	91
Concluding remarks on cereals	94
Chapter 2
Legumes and Pulses Chedropá and Óspria	95
Pulses in the archaeobotanical record of prehistoric Greece	95
Pulses in ancient Greek texts: species and the ways of cooking them	104
Óspria (ὄσπρια) and chedropá (χεδροπά)	104
Phakós, φακός (lentil) and phaké, φακῆ (Lentil soup)	109

Terms attributed to various Lathyrus species	111
Láthyros λάθυρος	111
Aphákē ἀφάκη	114
Óchros ὄχρος	115
Órobos ὄροβος (bitter vetch)	117
Píisos πίσος also πισός and píison (πίσον)	119
Kýamos κύαμος	120
Erébinthos ἐρέβινθος (chickpea)	122
Thérmos θέρμος (lupin, Lupinus albus)	124
Phaselos and dolichos: two terms that are difficult to identify	125
Phásēlos (or phaséolos ?) φάσηλος (or φασήολος?)	125
Dólīchos δόλιχος	125
Seven millennia of pulse cultivation	126

Chapter 3

Other seed crops 127

Archaeobotanical finds of oily seed crops 127

The consumption of linseed, poppy seed and sesame in ancient Greek texts 135

Línon, λίνον (linseed) 135

Mékōn, μήκων (opium poppy) 137

Sésamon, σήσαμον (sesame) 139

Oilseed crops: integrating archaeobotanical and textual evidence 141

Chapter 4

The connecting thread:

Ancient plant foods in the cuisine of modern Greece 143

Plant food ingredients from fields and beyond:

resilient crops, newcomers, seeds lost and found 143

Ancient plant food recipes in modern Greek cuisine,

alive and kicking 147

The legacy of ancient Greek plant foods –

some thoughts for the future 166

Ancient authors 169

Abbreviations 173

Bibliography 175